Israel studies how Riyadh decisions in Lebanon may affect borders

ANAN SAFADI
The second provision concerning the 1989 Cairo formula which, while supposed to restrict the PLO's armed presence in Lebanon, could in fact reestablish the terrorist in refugee camps and other parts of Lebanon, including Fatahland.

In accordance with the Riyadh summit decisions, a ceasefire is due to go into effect in Lebanon at 6 a.m. tomorrow. The PLO forces, their leftist allies and their Christian antagonists have been called to withdraw within 10 days to positions they held before the full-scale civil war started on April 12 last year.

It is intended that a ban on the presence of heavy weapons in populated areas should be enforced by the proposed joint Arab security force, which is to be formed at a pan-Arab summit in Cairo next Monday. The force would supervise the final phases of withdrawal by the warring factions in the course of the next two months.

It was not clear last night what attitude the rival leftist and rightist camps would take towards tomorrow morning's planned ceasefire.

Palestinian and Lebanese radicals yesterday maintained that Arafat's acquiescence in the terms of the 1989 Cairo agreement and the acceptance of Lebanon's sovereignty integrity is the worst setback the PLO has faced since its ouster from Jordan by King Hussein in 1971.

Palestinian extremists and Lebanese leftists were particularly dismayed by the fact that Arafat had failed to force the Riyadh summit to demand Syria's immediate withdrawal from Lebanon.

The fact that the issue of the Syrian military presence was omitted from the Riyadh protocols followed a dramatic statement by Lebanese President Sarkis that he himself opposed a Syrian pullout, according to Cairo newspapers. "The Syrian troops entered Lebanon at my request and their presence there is legitimate," Sarkis was reported as saying.

Leftists claimed that the Syrians stormed another village yesterday, strangling the last enclaves of the PLO and leftist neighbouring Beirut and the coastal cities of Tripoli, in the north, and Sidon to the south.

The PLO conceded yesterday to have lost its last major stronghold in southern Lebanon — the town of Marjayoun — to the Christian militia.

PLO spokesmen said that their forces have been virtually driven out of all Lebanon's southern region, neighbouring Israel. The spokesmen threatened "immediate vengeance." The threat came against the background of reports that fighting throughout Lebanon has nevertheless slackened drastically.

Saudia receives first of 700 Hawk missiles

HIRSH GOODMAN
Post Military Correspondent

Arabia recently received the first improved Hawk anti-air missile batteries from the U.S. The deal will include more missiles of the same type supplied to Jordan.

Other arms on consignment to Saudi Arabia from the U.S. include 14 batteries of improved Hawk anti-air missiles, 200 M-48 and M-60 tanks; 700 M-13 personnel carriers; 150 cannon, including 105mm and M-102 artillery pieces; 300 Red-Eye anti-personnel missiles; and 100 Vulcan anti-aircraft guns.

Another Arab country to benefit from American military hardware is Kuwait, which has been supplied with 36 Skyhawk A-4 aircraft, an unspecified number of Sidewinders; four batteries of improved Hawks; and two TP-37 radar systems.

Egypt and Syria have not received substantial amounts of American equipment, but according to a report from Saudi Arabia, Egypt will receive over $1b. in financial aid this year, of which $200m. worth will be in food.

Waldheim calls for extension of Unef mandate

UNITED NATIONS. — Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim yesterday recommended a further one-year extension of the UN Emergency Force (Unef) in Sinai when its present mandate expires on October 24.

The Security Council is to meet on Friday to renew the mandate. Neither side is expected to oppose the renewal.

Waldheim said that if there was no progress in efforts to achieve a Middle East settlement, the situation would "inevitably remain unstable in spite of peace-keeping and other arrangements."

Egypt and Syria to renew ties

CAIRO. — An Egyptian diplomat will leave for Damascus today to reopen the Egyptian relations of the Middle East. The official Middle East News Agency reported.

The move followed agreement in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, between Presidents Anwar Sadat of Egypt and Hafez Assad of Syria to restore full diplomatic relations suspended since last June. (Reuters)

Clements talks arms with Rabin

JERUSALEM POST REPORTER

U.S. Deputy Defence Secretary William Clements called on Premier Yitzhak Rabin yesterday morning and discussed Israel's weapons requirements in the context of expected developments in the region until the end of the decade.

Later, Clements visited Yad Vashem, where he was received by the chairman of the council, Minister without Portfolio Gideon Hausner. Clements said the younger generation had always to be reminded of the grim lessons of the Holocaust.

Yesterday afternoon Clements toured the Golan Heights, escorted by the Chief of Staff, Rav-Aluf Mordechai Gur.

'Mistake' led to farm-deal delay

JERUSALEM POST CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON. — The State Department said yesterday that a "technical or administrative misunderstanding" within the U.S. Government led to the sudden postponement last week of a planned ceremony concluding a five-year agricultural commodities supply agreement with Israel.

A spokesman for the Department told reporters that Israel's Minister of Commerce and Industry, Mr. Haim Bar-Lev, cancelled his scheduled visit to the U.S. to sign the agreement after Israel was officially informed by Washington that it was not possible for the U.S. to conclude the accord at this time.

Free Centre leaders vote to break with Likud

By SHOSHANA BIENBAUM
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The Free Centre movement last night broke away from the Likud bloc.

An overwhelming majority of Free Centre members at a meeting of the Executive and National Council of the movement voted for a motion calling for "the restoration of the independent activity of the Free Centre in public affairs, local authorities as well as in the Histadrut."

The vote was 48 for the motion, four against, and two abstentions.

The decision came after weeks of heavy pressure on party head Shmuel Tamir, who had postponed the split in the hope that the Likud might yet unify its ranks, and make radical changes in its "dovish" social and economic policy on the home front, a spokesman told The Jerusalem Post.

Though Tamir at first claimed there was no personal criticism involved, nor any against a particular Likud faction, his later comments on the "Moked" TV interview programme pointed to a strong dissatisfaction, verging on criticism of the party's "one man leadership."

The rigid lines set by Likud policy makers, claimed Tamir, did not take into consideration the changes the world was undergoing. "People don't budge from their stances and don't tackle problems," he said.

It is as yet unknown whether the Free Centre will join any other liberal parties before or after elections.

"We've only just begun to breathe the air of freedom," commented Tamir.

Relations between Likud leaders and Shmuel Tamir have appeared strained for some time and Likud MKs have been severe in their criticism of him in informal talks.

Much of the criticism was against Tamir's personality. MK Zalman Shoval said yesterday that Tamir's breakaway was "a result of his incapability to work in a friendly manner in any party forum."

Tamir appeared to have been frustrated partly because his colleagues in the Likud opposed full unity, thereby preventing him from canvassing support among the other factions.

Doctors continue sanctions

Overload at hospitals said 'near intolerable'

TEL AVIV. — The drastically reduced number of hospitals forced by doctors' sanctions to deal with all of the country's emergency cases yesterday handled patient loads of more than triple their normal capacity. Several hospital directors said it would be only a "short time" before the situation became "intolerable."

One of the duty hospitals, Assaf Harofe, yesterday handled almost 600 emergency patients, triple its normal load. Dr. Mordechai Varon, Assaf Harofe's deputy director, said that the hospital had taken all possible measures to deal with the increased volume. "We enlarged the medical teams in all departments, and are sending home any patient we do not consider a real emergency case."

Prof. Haim Doron, acting chairman of Kupat Holim, yesterday called on the hospital doctors to end their sanctions since "considerable progress" was being made in the negotiations. He said the latest sanctions were "without precedent in the history of medicine in Israel" and stressed that if continued the would soon "threaten human lives."

Dr. Doron represents Kupat Holim in the negotiations with the doctors.

Later in the day, after Dr. Doron made his plea, the doctors at Beilinson Hospital decided that "if the employers do not meet our demands immediately" they would resign collectively tomorrow. About 2,000 of the 2,200 hospital doctors have already indicated readiness to leave en masse.

Dr. Ya'acov Mencel, Director-General of the Ministry of Health, said yesterday that he was surprised that the doctors had intensified their sanctions since "progress was being made."

On Monday night, the hospital doctors, who have been working to rule for more than a month in their disputes with the country's hospitals, drastically cut the number of emergency "duty hospitals" which they would man after 4 p.m. in negotiations on Monday, the doctors and the hospitals reached agreement on one of the issues — payment for a round-the-clock duty shift. An increase of 1,000 in the number of would soon "threaten human lives."

Yadlin remand 'just the start' of major probe

The detention of Asher Yadin is but an early stage in a highly-ramified criminal investigation, a police spokesman said last night. Yadin, Governor-designate of the Bank of Israel, was yesterday remanded in custody for 15 days on suspicion of bribery and fraud, and was suspended as Kupat Holim chairman. The Cabinet is expected to withdraw its nomination of Yadin as head of the central bank at its regular session next Sunday. If it is unable by then to choose a new governor it will probably do so at a special session later in the week. The post has to be filled by November 1.

Estate agents questioned

By ARTHUR KEMELMAN
Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. — The wide-ranging investigation into financial and economic affairs touched off by the accusations against Asher Yadin will not cease because the Kupat Holim director-general has been detained, a police spokesman made clear yesterday.

The investigation will be a lengthy and comprehensive one, the spokesman said.

In the course of investigation yesterday, members of the Fraud Squad questioned a number of real estate agents connected with two company. Reports also claim that land deals. The police spokesman refused to indicate what these deals were, but pointed out that they had not been mentioned in the Attorney-General's report on Sunday.

Other than those subjects raised in court yesterday, investigators began examining the affairs of a company called Hamarveh, which imports automatic machinery for preparing hot and cold drinks.

Police say Meir Kimhi, the Kupat Holim chief accountant, who was the first person arrested, is one of the managers of a Hamarveh subsidiary that maintains the parent company's equipment.

According to a newspaper report, Amnon Barnes, a close friend of Yadin's, is also linked to this company. Reports also claim that shares in the company. The news-deals were, but pointed out that paper added that some of the funds that Yadin obtained from various deals found their way into Hamarveh.

Remanded 15 days

JERUSALEM POST STAFF

TEL AVIV. — Asher Yadin was remanded for 15 days at Magistrate's Court here yesterday on suspicion of having accepted various sums of money in bribes and kickbacks on deals involving Kupat Holim, of which he is the director-general.

Magistrate Haim Shapira approved the police request that Yadin's detention be extended, at the end of a court hearing which lasted five hours.

Fifteen-day detention orders were also handed down for Mordechai Elison, a former Solei Bomeh official, and Meir Kimhi, the chief accountant of Kupat Holim. Attorney Shlomo Gur, who was involved in the Tel Aviv medical centre deal and represented Yadin in a flat bought by Yadin but registered in the name of Hava Erlichman, was ordered held for seven days.

Nitzav-Mishne Binyamin Seigel, who is heading the investigation, presented the court with a list of the police suspicions against Yadin:

- That he accepted bribes totalling IL48,000 from four land deals involving Kupat Holim in Netanya, Petah Tikva, Ramat Hasharon and Ra'anana;
- That he evaded the land betterment tax on the sale of a flat in Bat Yam.
- That he dishonestly received money by hiding the fact that, (Continued on page 2, col. 2)

New appointment may come Sunday

By ASHER WALLFISH and JOSHUA BRILLIANT

The Cabinet probably will decide next Sunday to cancel its nomination of Asher Yadin as governor of the Bank of Israel, and at the same time approve a new candidate in his stead, a veteran Labour minister told The Post last night.

The Cabinet will no longer wait as close as possible to the end of the month, he said, since Yadin's arrest has created a new situation, which did not exist at its Sunday session when all the Ministers agreed by consensus to defer their decision till as full a picture as possible was available. "The new situation both allows us and obligates us to speed up our decision," the Labour minister told The Post.

Another Cabinet source said that, owing to unforeseen circumstances, Premier Yitzhak Rabin had not found the man he wanted as governor-designate by Sunday morning, he would summon a mid-week Cabinet session.

Finance Minister Yehoshua Rabinowitz is assumed to be busy Sunday session when all the Ministers agreed by consensus to defer their decision till as full a picture as possible was available. "The new situation both allows us and obligates us to speed up our decision," the Labour minister told The Post.

Ports Authority in state of chaos — III Payment by results at root of trouble

Zvi Ra'anana argues that one of the main evils in the ports is the failure of the Authority to end the antiquated wage system.

Although the mechanics of work organization in our ports has created tensions between dockers and management, the principal source of recurring trouble has been the dockers' wage-incentive scheme. Yet, there has been no professional examination of its suitability for the 15 years of the Ports Authority's existence.

In manufacturing there is much to be said for payment by results, especially in inflationary times. Above all, it enables the worker to increase his income in return for increased output, thus creating a happy community of interest between employer and employee.

It is also considered self-monitoring, the foreman's role changing to one of qualitative rather than quantitative control, but this sometimes causes problems.

But an essential prerequisite for the successful operation of such a scheme is a fairly constant mode of production. Technological change or changes in the product require a readjustment of the norms (and this is where trouble often begins).

A joint productivity council—composed of representatives of workers, management and impartial productivity experts (who do the measuring)—is usually charged with this task. It requires delicate handling by management and good relations with the workers. If technological or other objective changes take place more frequently than once in two years, there seems little point to a bi-annual collective wage agreement, except possibly as a point of departure. For the productivity council does, in effect, renegotiate workers' pay.

Now let us look at the ports: In the last decade they have been subject to non-stop technological change — bigger and better cranes and fork-trucks with greater lifting and shifting capacities, new bulk handling techniques, ships equipped with side openings and lifts rather than the conventional deck hatch-openings, roll-on roll-off vessels, container ships.

The cargo units have also changed: pre-packaged timber, palletised general cargo, frozen cargo in slings, cargo on wheels or in containers.

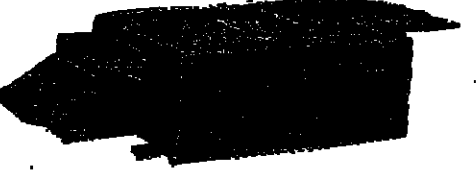

Any productivity council would be hard-put to keep up with such changes even with the most idyllic of labour relations. Can anyone conceive re-negotiating their wages once a fortnight, or even once a month, without getting one's nerves severely frayed?

Even half-yearly revision of all relevant cargo norms had serious

11,000 Lebanese treated here since Good Fence opened

By HIRSH GOODMAN
Jerusalem Post Military Correspondent

Over 11,000 victims of the Lebanese civil war, including more than 4,000 Moslems, have been treated at Israeli military medical units along the Good Fence since operations started in June this year, a senior defense source told The Jerusalem Post yesterday.

Nearly 350 Lebanese have been hospitalized in northern Israel over the past four months with all expenses being carried by the Defense Ministry. The bill is expected to be in the region of IL$500,000. Since October 1, Lebanese have been asked to pay their own expenses, but the Ministry will continue to pay for those who claim not to have the money.

The injured who arrive at the border are being treated at three clinics set up at Dover, Metulla and at Milestone Six near Kibbutz Hazita. Each station is manned by two Israeli doctors and two Israeli nurses while two of the stations have paid Lebanese nurses as well.

Today, it was learned, a delegation of Lebanese Moslem and Christian schoolteachers will cross the border to visit two Israeli schools in the north, including the kibbutz regional school at Kfar Blum. Arrangements are also being made for several Lebanese agriculturalists to attend full-time courses in Israel at Government-sponsored institutions, and at Government expense.

It was pointed out yesterday that all these arrangements have been made at the request of the Lebanese. There are an estimated 250,000 living in 130 villages in southern Lebanon, constituting seven per cent of the total population of the country. About 20 per cent are Christians.

Trade with the inhabitants of southern Lebanon has recently topped the IL$2m mark, with Lebanese buying mainly flour, sugar and, most recently, agricultural supplies. Israel in turn provides jobs for 300 workers from across the border who earn Histadrut wages at a variety of factories in the north, including Dubek and Kiyat Shmuna textile works. A request has been put in with the Labour Ministry to issue an additional 200 work permits, due to repeated requests from villagers in the area for work.

There are also 700 requests for "visas" to visit Israel currently being investigated. To date, some 300 Lebanese have been allowed to visit Israel, or to use Ben-Gurion International Airport to get to either Europe or the U.S.

Israel has also agreed to purchase the entire south Lebanese tobacco crop when it comes up for sale in February. Last year, Israel bought the crop for $600,000 — most of the money being paid out in Israel pounds.

Israeli officials reported yesterday that the news of impending peace in Lebanon did not lead to a drop in Lebanese requiring Israeli facilities. They indicated as well that the Good Fence would operate as long as the inhabitants of the area want to use Israeli services, and openly hope that an arrangement will develop in the area which will be similar to the Open Bridges policy on the Jordan River.

Tarshish shipping strike over at last

Jerusalem Post Reporter
The month-long by the Marine Officers against Tarshish, the kibbutz shipping line, ended last night.
A mediation session called by Labour Ministry's chief relations officer, Nahman Golan, an agreement was reached out resolving all differences between the union and company.
Following the agreement, the four ships will resume activities. Some of the have been tied in Haifa unable to off-load cargo because of the disputed pay claims of its sailors.
The union yesterday prevented an attempt to unload and trans-ship over 1,000 tons of export cargoes, aboard the Palmah, one of the four ships under strike.
Two gangs of stevedores boarded the ship to unload the cargo, but the officers refused to open the hatches, so the stevedores left the ship without incident.
The head of the port's Operations Department, Capt. Herzl Shakhnai, told The Jerusalem Post that he had sent the men on board at the request of the exporters, who were anxious to get their cargoes moving.

Seamen's strike halts export of citrus fruit

Jerusalem Post Reporter
The export of citrus fruit has already exceeded 50 million cases, was suspended after a strike by Seamen's Union against the union is asking for a 20% increase in the price of the special dolent the seamen receive year and the union had lost its patience.
Meanwhile, the Marine Officers Union said yesterday it will file official notification of a labour dispute with the shipping companies today, to back their demand for immediate negotiations for a new labour contract.
The union claims that the present contract expired nine months ago, and that despite their threat to strike the whole merchant marine, the companies have not agreed to negotiate.
A company spokesman reiterated yesterday that, as reported in The Jerusalem Post last week, there is no practical possibility of negotiating a contract because the Treasurer has not clarified its stand on whether or not it will enforce the tax reform on the seamen. The seamen, through strikes and threats of strike, have been able to stifle any attempt to apply the reform to them since last April, when it went into force for the public at large.

El Al pilots to set up own firm to supply crews at low rates

By ZEEV SCHUL
Jerusalem Post Aviation Reporter
TEL AVIV. — El Al's flight crews intend to become "independent operators" and set up their own company to supply pilots and technical flight crews to airlines, including El Al, at rates substantially lower than those now being paid by El Al for their services.
"This is not intended to serve as a tool to blackmail El Al or make it more malleable in anticipation of new labour contract negotiations," the chairman of the pilots' start committee, Capt. Gideon Arbel, and his deputy, Capt. Uri Cohen, told The Jerusalem Post yesterday. (The present contract expires in April, 1977.)
"What we want is to offer an alternative and a way out of an impasse over contract negotiations. We'd rather work for free than have to resort to strikes or sanctions," Arbel said. "We want to release El Al from a possible deadlock which would be disastrous for us. We will pay income tax as required and still be better off than we are today. There will be no problems of paying overtime or providing social security for us."
Cohen added: "We think that our proposal will be a real breakthrough in labour relations. We've been working on it for six months and are about to file for formal recognition with the registrar of companies. Most important to us is that we will be able to substantiate our claim that we are the major productive sector of the flight crews. We think that we will be able to offer our services at prices as low as one-quarter of foreign pilots' hourly rates ($200)."
It is understood that all of El Al's 210 captains and first officers will join the company as shareholders.
"If El Al agrees to employ us, we will be able to use the severance pay due to us as company assets," The Post was told. The pilots also hope to be able to obtain employment with CAL (Mordochai Hod's cargo air line).
Cohen was aware that the pilots needed El Al permission to take on "extra work." "This is as per contract. But our agreement will expire on April 1, 1977," he said. (Cohen did not discuss the possibility that there could be a renewal of the contract, evidently considering the Ben Shihah tax situation too much of a hurdle for the negotiations. The tax reform stipulates that for tax assessment, the crew's foreign currency earnings be converted into Israeli pounds and taxed at full rate. The flight crews argue that they are entitled to a special tax discount rate because this helped them meet living expenses during the half of every month spent abroad.)
"El Al is dependent on our service," Cohen answered when asked what would happen if El Al refused to use the services of the company and there would, simultaneously, be no new wage agreement.

"We intend to go ahead with this, but it is possible that we will delay establishment of the company until after the general staff meeting of flight crews scheduled for November 2."
El Al press officer Mordochai Savitzky told The Post yesterday evening that so far El Al had not been approached on the matter. However, informed sources commented that El Al executives were interested in the offer "on a purely technical basis" and especially the pilots' claim that they would be willing to hire themselves out at a rate one-quarter that of foreign airline pilots and for less than the company was now paying them.
This move dashes the last hopes of setting up an overall roof-staff committee as recommended earlier this year by the Histadrut and Transport Ministries and, on an immediate basis, divorces the cabin attendants from the pilots.
"There is nothing to prevent them from setting up a similar outfit of their own — and offer their services on a competitive basis, just as we are doing. We will be doing our job more efficiently and for less money than anyone else can," Captain Arbel concluded.

Hebron curfew lifted; Tomb open to public

The 16-day curfew in Hebron, recently restricted to night time, yesterday was abolished completely. The town's Tomb of the Patriarchs, a major shrine for both Jews and Moslems, is to be reopened to the public today.
The curfew in Hebron was imposed earlier this month following reciprocal acts of desecrating religious shrines and Jewish artifacts at the Tomb's Machpelah Cave on the eve of Yom Kippur. The cave itself had been closed for repairs.
The authorities are planning to put on trial a number of Arabs from Hebron, as well as settlers from Kiryat Arba, for having provoked the religious strife at the shrine.
The Government yesterday was reported to have rejected a proposal by Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren to divide the Tomb of the Patriarchs into two separate sanctuaries for Jews and Moslems.

Central Israel draws with London's Harrow cricket club

By JACK LEON
Jerusalem Post Sports Reporter
ASHDOD. — Despite a magnificent unbeaten century by their captain, Isaac Solomon, Central Israel had to be satisfied with a draw against London's Harrow club here on Monday.
Solomon, 27, a former Karachi University player, scored 102 out of his team's total of 150 for 6 declared, and at the close in the evening the guests had reached 108, also for the loss of six wickets.
Driving, pulling and square-cutting with great authority, Solomon cracked 14 boundaries — including three huge sixes — in his 102, made in a little over two hours, with his second 50 coming in only 35 minutes. Rahamin contributed an invaluable six to an unbeaten seventh-wicket stand of 61 with his skipper. Central's only other double-figure innings came from Talker, who made a useful 16.
Harrow's star guest-player Basil D'Oliveira claimed 2 for 19 with his off-breaker — he also took a spectacular catch in the slips while leg-spinner Barrett had 2 for 38.
The visitors, left with only two hours batting, got off to a brisk start, spearheaded by an aggressive 32 from Darcy which included six splendid boundaries. Lipman, Haynes and England all reached 11, but D'Oliveira was beautifully taken down low by wicketkeeper Solomon off quick-bowler Yosef for eight, while trying to force the pace. After Harrow lost three quick wickets, Scott (13) and Meyers (11) held out defiantly for 40 minutes. They both remained unbeaten when stumps were drawn.
Yosef finished with 3 for 36, and medium-pace Ben-Shimon claimed 3 for 24 — both in long spells of bowling. It was a pity Central's spinners were not given a chance with the ball at the end.
Umpires were David Benjamin and Noah Davidson.
Ashdod Deputy Mayor Sam Bloom gave a reception for the two teams on Monday, in which Harrow's joint tour managers Geoffrey Davis and Henry Pinkus and captain Keith Scott took part with the "father of Ashdod cricket," Ben Zion Daniel.
The guests, who were defeated by Southern Israel in their opening fixture, continue their tour with a match against Northern Israel at Kibbutz Yizrael on Saturday.

Jerusalem Post Reporter
Sixteen jets carrying 4,000 U.S. Jews will arrive during the coming week for the United Jewish Appeal's first national conference ever held in Israel.
The meet is being held under the slogan: "This Year in Jerusalem."
Meant to demonstrate American Jewry's solidarity with Israel, the conference will provide the largest UJA contingent ever to come here at one time. It will open officially next Monday at the Yad Eliyahu Sports Palace in Tel Aviv, and will be addressed by Golda Meir. The closing rally five days later will hear an address by Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.
During their stay, the group will attend university seminars.

As the Prime Minister and the Minister of Education (right, in white shirt) chatted in the lobby of the Jerusalem Theatre before the Volunteer Medal award ceremony, a demonstrating social worker approached and unfurled a poster backing the social workers' current campaign for better pay and conditions. Mr. Rabin said, "What's this? Let's read it," and turned to the demonstrator. But when he had read the poster's message, the Prime Minister (left, with back to camera) said, "Go and demonstrate outside." The social worker refused, saying he had a right to be there, and refused to be persuaded by a ministerial bodyguard (far right) to leave the building. He stayed, but with his poster rolled up, perhaps satisfied that both ministers had got the message. (Rahamin Yisraeli)

Katzir awards prizes for volunteer work

Jerusalem Post Reporter
An overflow audience jammed the Jerusalem Theatre yesterday afternoon for the third annual award of the President's Volunteer Medal.
President Ephraim Katzir and Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, MK Esther Herlitz and Minister of Police Shlomo Hillel were present, as were Education Minister Aharon Yadin, Labour Minister Moshe Bar-Am and Minister without Portfolio Gideon Hausner. Mrs. Nina Katzir and Mrs. Lea Rabin also attended the ceremony.
President Katzir paid tribute to the award-winning volunteers who had been chosen from among more than 600 recommendations received from the "grass-roots" public. He also praised the thousands of others who engaged daily in volunteer activities quietly and without publicity on behalf of their fellow citizens.
Recipients of the awards were: Hilda Gurevitch, of Haifa, for work with bereaved families; Menahem Zaharoni, of Haifa, for establishing schools and teachers' seminars, on a volunteer basis; a team of members of Moshav Massot Yitzhak, for work with Georgian and Bukharan immigrants; the Oded settlement group, for working with youth in 10 development towns; Jenny Aloni, Lucia Boehm, Edith Tyman, and Helen Levinger, for adopting patients at the Be'er Ya'acov mental hospital; Mathilda, Ninette and Ziva Uzan, mother, daughter and granddaughter from Herzliya, for setting up neighbourhood welfare services.
Earlier in the day, the Voluntary Service Centre held discussions at the Van Leer Institute on mobilizing volunteers and reaching the public in need of services. Among the speakers was Welfare Minister Zevulun Hammer, who advocated setting up volunteer departments in all the relevant ministries, and exploiting the relatively inexpensive manpower available as fully as possible, through efficient coordination.
While the talks were going on, volunteers to work with the Israel Defence Forces for two weeks in the Jerusalem area were being recruited on King George Street downtown. The recruitment effort will continue today, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Echeverria challenge to Waldheim at UN

UNITED NATIONS.—Mexican President Luis Echeverria has challenged Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim for election as secretary-general for a five-year term starting January 1. The announcement cast substantial doubt on the previously unchallenged candidacy of incumbent Waldheim.

At the same time, an East European diplomat told the Associated Press that China now wants the election for the UN chief executive put off until December "so that the Third World may field a candidate."

Until Monday, Waldheim, whose bid for re-election has been endorsed by a number of countries including the 48-nation Organization of African Unity (OAU), was also thought to have the backing of all the veto-wielding permanent members of the Security Council — China, Britain, France, the Soviet Union and the U.S.

Council sources also had expected the 15-nation panel to recommend Waldheim's election by the General Assembly before November.

Echeverria's candidacy, announced here on Monday by Mexican Ambassador Roberto de Rosenzweig Diaz, not only presented a challenge to the Austrian diplomat, the only other announced candidate, but also opened a contest a few diplomats had expected.

"It's a whole new ball game," said an African diplomat.

Diaz' original announcement said the retiring Mexican president "would be a candidate if there is a current of opinion favouring a candidate of the Third World."

But later, he told newsmen that Echeverria's candidacy is official "without butts or ifs" and rated Echeverria's chances as "good" based on what he called "general information."

Despite Monday's development, however, Echeverria is not considered a serious contender in diplomatic circles. Many cite his poor showing, as they put it, among the Council's Big Five.

But a Western diplomat stressed that his announcement might induce other potential candidates to enter the field.

Among those most frequently mentioned are H. Shirley Amerasinghe of Sri Lanka, the current General Assembly president who won high marks as president of the on-going Law of the Sea Conference; Ambassador Salim A. Salim of Tanzania, who, at 58, probably is the most respected Black African diplomat here; and Ambassador Carlos Ortiz de Rozas of Argentina.

If Echeverria was counting on the support from the 25-nation Latin American group, it was clear that he was not going to get their backing, at least as a group.

Rozas, an influential member of the group, said earlier that the group will adhere to its traditional policy of not endorsing a candidate for secretary-general.

Waldheim last week announced his intention to seek re-election.

Waiver of death sentence asked for Istanbul killers

ISTANBUL.—The public prosecutor yesterday asked a Turkish court to waive the automatic death sentence for two Palestinian terrorists charged with the attack on El Al passengers here August 11, in which four persons were killed.

The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine terrorists, Mehdi Mohammed, 22, and Mohammed Rashid, 22, pleaded guilty yesterday to a charge of multiple premeditated murder, which under Turkish law carries an automatic death sentence. But prosecutor Mustafa Fohkduman said this should be reduced to life imprisonment because of "provocation before the act."

guide and an American diplomat were killed in the attack at the Istanbul airport. The terrorists apparently were trying to hijack the El Al plane, but were discovered by a Turkish security check. They threw grenades and opened fire with automatic weapons in the airport terminal, killing the four and wounding 22 others.

One of the accused, Mohammed, told the court that by "condemning us to death this court will be condemning the Palestinian cause." The two terrorists admitted, in the heavily guarded courtroom, that they had carried out the attack.

The trial was adjourned until November 15. (UPI)

'Mao's nephew planned coup by 10,000 troops'

TOKYO.—China dropped some hints yesterday about the reported coup attempt by four radical leaders, and Japanese reports indicated a military man said to be Mao Tse-tung's nephew also was involved.

Quoting reliable sources close to Chinese authorities, Japan's Kyodo news service said Mao's nephew, Mao Yuan-hsin, officially listed as a "leading member" of Shenyang army units in Northeast China, was to have brought 10,000 troops to Peking, to use them for a coup against Hua Kuo-feng, Mao's successor.

In all, more than 30 persons, including Mao Yuan-hsin, have been reported arrested.

An editorial in the official newspaper "People's Daily" declared:

"We must thoroughly expose and repudiate all those who betray Marxism-Leninism-Mao Tse-tung thought, tamper with Chairman Mao's directives, practice revisionism and splitism, engage in conspiracies and attempt to usurp Party and state power, and struggle resolutely against them."

The phrase about usurping power was new, after several days of warning about splitism and conspiracies.

Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, Communist Party Vice Chairman Wang Hung-wen, Vice Premier Chang Chun-dao and Politburo Member Yao Wen-yuan have been reported arrested for tampering with Mao's hints yesterday about the reported coup attempt by four radical leaders, and Japanese reports indicated a military man said to be Mao Tse-tung's nephew also was involved.

In Hongkong, the leading Communist newspaper "Wen Wei Po" said an army regiment in Canton condemned "all revisionists who engage in intrigues and conspiracies, about revolutionary slogans with the loudest voices and who call themselves 'students of the leader.'"

The phrase "students of the leader" was considered a reference to the inscription "your student and comrade-in-arms" which Chiang Ching wrote on a wreath for Mao, who died September 9.

Meanwhile, in a little-noticed remark, the U.S. has issued what could be construed as a warning to the Soviet Union and Taiwan not to exploit current political uncertainties in China.

At a news conference in Boston last Friday, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said the U.S. believes "the territorial integrity and sovereignty of China is very important to the world equilibrium and we will consider it a grave matter if this were threatened by outside powers."

He did not specify which outside power he had in mind, but both Russia and Taiwan have grievances against China.

State Department spokesman Robert Funseth on Monday said in response to questions that Kissinger's remark represented no shift in U.S. policy. (AP, Reuter)

'God-ordered' slayer dies on gallows

NASSAU.—Michajah Shobek, who admitted slaying three fellow Americans after coming here as a tourist, was hanged yesterday in the small gallows room at Her Majesty's prison at Fox Head.

The execution came 29 months after Shobek, a 22-year-old handyman and would-be songwriter, confessed to the murders. He said he was told by God to kill them because they were "angels of Lucifer."

He was buried without ceremony in a small section of the Old Trail Cemetery reserved for paupers and murderers.

Juanita Spencer, who fought for clemency for her son during his long imprisonment, said he was devoured by a childhood viral infection. She stayed at her home in Milwaukee rather than be here for the execution and made no effort to claim the body.

On Monday a Bahamian group opposed to capital punishment, the Bain Town Freedom and Justice Committee, appealed to the island's churchmen to protest the hanging.

The hanging of a Bahamian last February for killing a customs inspector drew protests from the group and led to the arrest of 14 of its members. (AP)

Flood of denials from U.S. firm identified as boycott participant

WASHINGTON.—Many U.S. companies identified as participants in the Arab boycott of Israel are complaining they in fact are frequent trading partners with the nation they supposedly are boycotting.

The U.S. Commerce Department on Monday released the names of firms involved in 59 transactions with Arab nations since October 7. That was the day President Gerald Ford announced his decision to support the Arab boycott.

The documents claimed that some of America's largest corporations — Citibank of New York, Bank of America of San Francisco, McGraw-Hill International, James Beam distilling company, Kayser-Roth Corporation, White-Westinghouse and John Deere and Company — have complied with the boycott.

But as the concerns listed learned of their status, many began issuing denials.

"The party who is supposed to be boycotting Israel is as Jewish as Golda Meir, and that's me. Now how could I boycott Israel?" said Joe Gerson, president of Gerson International of Fort Wayne, Indiana. "It happens there is absolutely not one iota, not one particle of truth in it."

Gerson said his export company deals with a number of countries that have restrictive trade clauses, such as an Arab requirement that goods not be shipped in vessels calling at Israeli ports. They do not affect him and he would not comply with them if they did.

A spokesman for John Deere and Company, a tractor manufacturer which traded with Saudi Arabia, said, "We sell to both Israel and Arab countries and have for many years and intend to continue doing so. To the best of our knowledge, we are not boycotting any organization or any nation."

The president of the Southern Overseas Corporation, L. Doss, Jr., denied the firm actively took part in the boycott. "The only reason I see that we were on the Commerce Department list was because we cooperated with their requirement that we report any Arab attempt to force us to conform with the boycott," he said. "Maybe we... handled a shipment for an American exporter that cooperated with the boycott."

He also offered the possible explanation that the federal forms for reporting on the boycott are "long, messy and complicated — difficult to fill out. Maybe one of our employees made a mistake on the form, and that's why we're on the list."

The following statement was issued by the director of corporate public relations for Gulf and Western Industries, whose Kayser-Roth corporation subsidiary was on the Commerce Department list: "The facts are true, it can only have happened before we acquired Kayser-Roth. Support of the Arab boycott is completely contrary to the policy of Gulf and Western Industries and it will not be tolerated."

The Commerce Department documents show, however, that in nearly all cases, the American firm denied that it had complied with boycott requests. In a few instances, the companies said other parties to the transaction would have to decide on the boycott, or a company say it to comply.

Part of the confusion may come from the nature of the Arab boycott. A congressional report earlier this year reported is often loosely enforced. Terms vary from country to country. Only rarely does it require a company to avoid all business with Israel.

In most cases, the American companies were asked to join a boycott. In many cases, the American companies must certify that their products or components were not made in Israel. The primary economic warfare.

The tertiary boycott requires a company to refuse to deal with a company appearing on an Arab blacklist. An Arab buyer would require an American firm to avoid a blacklisted insurance company shipping company in a trade.

This kind of boycott has been strongly criticized in Congress. Representatives passed a bill last session that would have barred American companies complying with the boycott.

Congress adjourned a conference committee could differences between House and Senate anti-boycott bills. (AP, Los Angeles)

Unesco director seeks to head 'Israel issue' at Nairobi meeting

PARIS.—Diplomatic efforts are being made behind the scenes in an effort to prevent a further major political clash for the first time in the history of the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, which is to open in Nairobi, Kenya, on October 26.

Third World attacks on Israel dominated Unesco's last conference held in Paris in 1974. The Conference voted to cut off aid to Israel and banned it from participating in activities of Unesco's European group.

The General Conference — held every two years — is being held outside Paris for the first time in the history of the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, whose director-general, Ahmadou Mahtar Mbow, comes from Senegal, West Africa.

Mbow is reported to be anxious to ensure that this General Conference — the 19th — should not see a renewal of the bitterness and rivalries of 1974.

He is also reported studying a sharp statement criticizing Unesco's political slant issued recently by 180 member states.

Following Unesco's 1974 decision on Israel, the U.S. Congress voted to block American contributions to Unesco, which represented about 15 per cent of the organization's entire budget (each country pays according to its per capita income). Unesco soon found itself in financial difficulties, but Arab oil-producing states came to the rescue with interest-free loans.

Some Western countries saw this as confirmation of fears that the Third World might eventually use its massive voting power to force Israel out of Unesco altogether.

The U.S. at one stage threatened to withdraw from Unesco, a step it has already announced it is to take at the Geneva-based International Labour Organization.

Washington has assured its voting rights in Nairobi by paying group.

its $3.5m. contribution for the period 1973-74, but at some $38m. from 1975-76.

However, according to sources here, work is active on behind the scenes to reach a compromise on the issue at the General Conference.

One possible solution here would be for each group to select its own rather than leaving the decision to the General Conference. Third World, aided by Communist states, has a built-in Such a compromise would enable Washington to remain in Unesco, while full participation in activities.

Finnish tally shows shift to right

HELSINKI.—The Conservative and Centre parties gained at the expense of the Social Democrats and Communists in municipal elections in Finland, results showed yesterday.

Unofficial totals from Sunday and Monday's voting showed the Social Democrats ahead with 25 per cent of the vote, down more than 2 per cent from the 1972 figures. The Conservatives won 20.3 per cent, up nearly 3 per cent from 1972 and enough to move them ahead of the Communists as the nation's second largest party.

The Communists won 13.5 per cent, up 1 per cent from 1972, while the Centre Party totalled 13.8 per cent, an increase of .8 per cent over six years ago.

The shift to the right was most evident in urban areas, with the centre-right parties rolling up majorities in the six largest cities. (AP)

MIAMI BEACH.—Two youthful Jewish Defence League members were arrested on Monday night on charges of disorderly conduct as they disrupted a performance given by Soviet pianist Lazer Berman.

Glenn Gottlieb, a University of Miami student, was arrested after he interrupted the recital by jumping on stage and yelling, "Save Soviet Jewry."

Later Brett Becker, 19, was arrested after he handcuffed himself to the balcony railing in the theatre. Becker was dressed in a grey-striped outfit similar to Soviet prison uniforms and he was carrying a sign that read "Save Soviet Jewry." (UPI)
